

Hi everyone!

Here's the latest map of what's what and where you can find information as at 10am, 21st Feb 2004.

What you must accept:

- Everything is connected. It's literally a rabbit warren – many different paths can take you to the same place and along the way you stumble upon things on a different website...that you probably won't find if starting from that other website in the first place.
- There are a lot more changes to come.
- You could get wound up about it, or chill and enjoy the core business of teaching your wee petals ways to add scrumptious details to their writing and use full stops instead of commas.

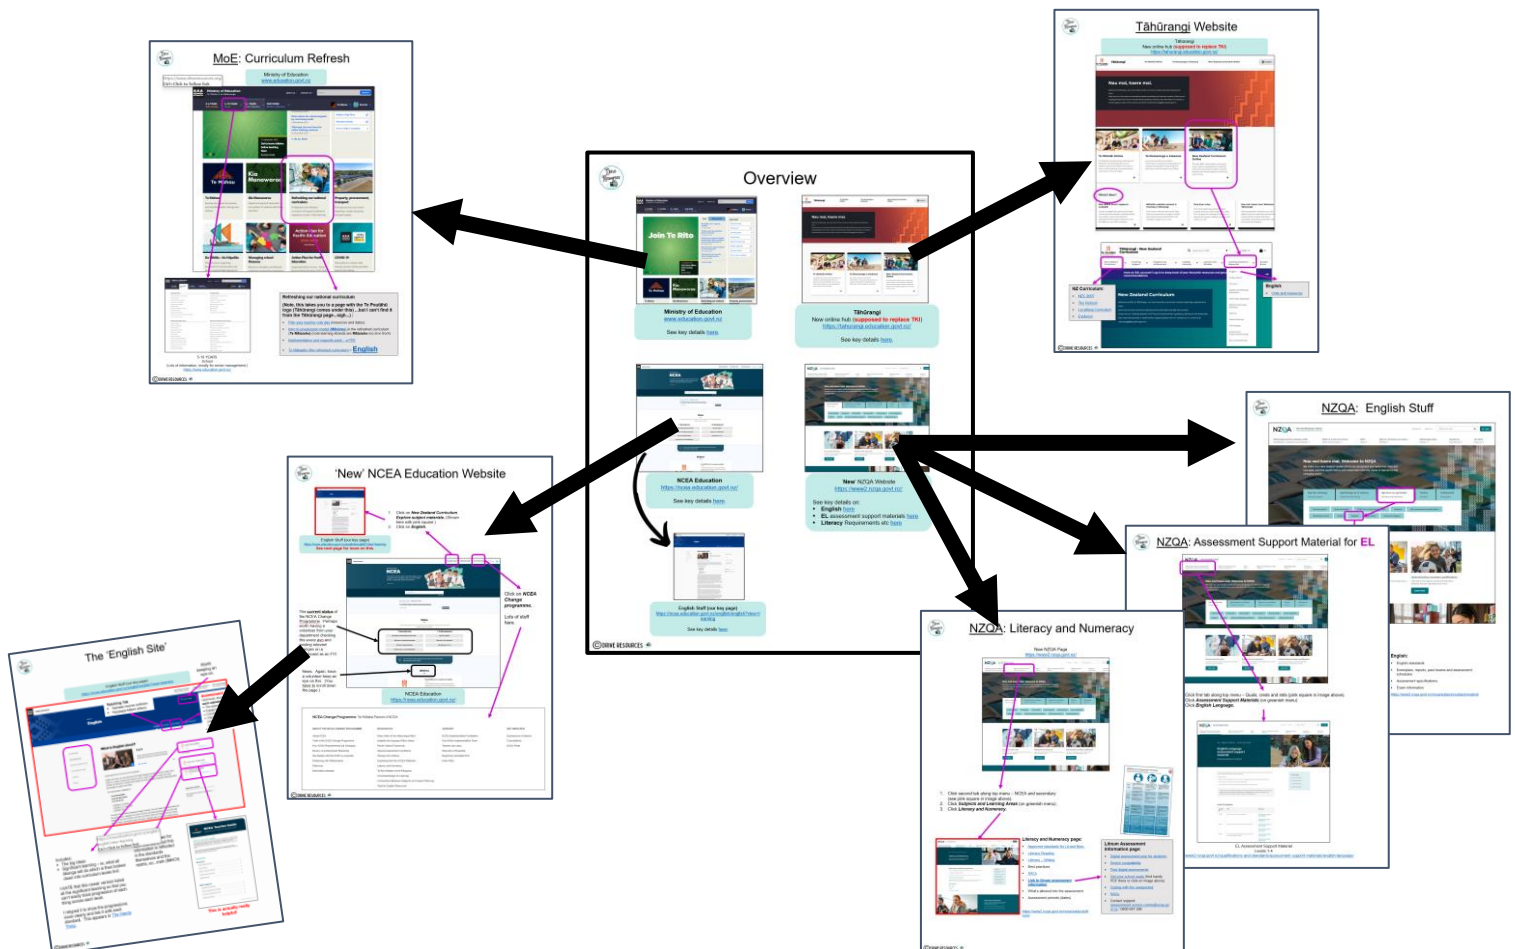

All the pages in this document have:

- Images that are already hyperlinked – just click on them.
- Hyperlinks also underneath the images because some people will like seeing the URL paths ...ummm...which don't always seem logical but...sigh...

Note, some images have a thick red border. They're your key go-to sites!

You could:

- Save this document to your laptop.
- As you find the key links that YOU always use, bookmark them on your browser.
- Print and staple these pages together. Keep them beside you as a guide while you surf.
- Print these pages out to lay out on the floor or on a wall (department art work!) to create a bit of a map. This will help you process where things are. (Well... I guess it's already done for you below. LOL)
